Any sufficiently advanced technology is indistinguishable from magic. - Arthur C. Clarke

Moore's Law is an observation that states that the number of transistors on an integrated circuit doubles approximately every two years. What that in essence means is one can expect rapid advancements in technology, with exponential net results for the consumers of digital electronics. In simpler terms – the world is moving quickly.

Technology has been Debco's number one growth category over the last number of quarters. We have experienced our own iteration of Moore's law, in that demand for all things tech has grown exponentially over that time. What's more exciting to us is the massive growth opportunity this rocketing category presents to our partners. It has already paid off in huge returns for those 'early adopters' who took a chance on educating themselves on an emerging product category and took to the field to champion its cause. The learning curve may have seemed steep, but ultimately proved to be not so daunting after all.

It dawned on us that such a perceived barrier-to-entry seemed somewhat ironic. After all, isn't the overriding ideology of technology to make life easier? Why should it then seem such an intimidating obstacle for 'newbies' to hurdle? Much of our Market Research indicated that it was just this holding people back. Fear of the esoteric; the mysterious, complex or convoluted. What a shame, especially considering that the reality is that it's just not the case.

Well, we thought, that's on us to make right.

So we present you with Totally Tech, sixty-four pages of information, tips, and tricks, combined with the innovative products that will allow you to take full advantage of them. We'll walk you through some of the basics (Stan's Cheat Sheet for Dummies, page 52) and go deeper into others (Powering Your Mobility, page 3). You'll hear from both the Tech-obsessed and the Tech-repressed (page 32 & 33), while along the way learn some helpful Tech Tips that will hopefully improve the way you use the Tech you already know and love. And in our Wearable Technology article (page 20) you'll find out how those products may ultimately save your life.

So sit back and relax, grab yourself a coffee and stretch your legs out. Let the following pages be your guide to unlocking the huge growth potential represented by Debco's Tech products. Let's see if we can create some 'magic' of our own.

POWERING YOUR MOBILITY

POWERBANKS HAVE BECOME AN ESSENTIAL PART OF THE TECH-LIFESTYLE

by Alex Morin

Here's a common scenario; you arrive at a client meeting with a phone fully charged from the night before. The meeting begins haltingly, as the client grills you on a series of minutiae in a random fashion. You begin to get the feeling that there is something else at play here, so you begin to ask pointed questions aimed at routing out the real cause. Through the ensuing dialogue a new picture begins to emerge.

The issues with the Singapore contract; the logistical variances in your last order; the vagaries of the market place and your relationship together within it. And then it comes out, "we're doing some restructuring and a potential new partner has approached us." A new partner that just happens to do exactly what your company does. The competition.

This is going to be a long day, and you're not going back to the office anytime soon.

It's a day of using the portable office – your smartphone – to request supporting documents, verify emails, download PDFs and Google clever phrases from Sun Tzu's Art of War. With every jab and riposte, you begin to make headway. Tensions in the room ease with each obstacle hurdled. Midway through the afternoon you realize that you can save this relationship; all you need to do is continue to make your case...

Suddenly the charge status on your phone turn to red. One lonely bar blinks back at you, like the waning pulse of a mortally wounded creature. A sweat gathers on your spine as you frantically try to convert charge bars to real time; how long do I have left?

From this mother of a necessity was the power bank born.

Keep a charged one with you at all times and you will never have to face this again. It's not a charger, per se, you already have one of those and it came with your phone. No, think of a power bank as a life recharger, a redundancy system for emergencies. You could just as easily think of it as a deal recharger, or as a business recharger. It buys you a second chance – a priceless second chance.

Okay, so you're converted. But knowing that you need a power bank is only half the problem. There are so many models that the problem becomes knowing which one to get, right? That's actually not complicated at all. Power banks only survive on the marketplace if they service the needs of a wide variety of smartphones. Modern phone makers provide an option for USB charging bundled in the box alongside the standard AC adaptor cable. If not, it's not hard to get one, and usually for not more than a few bucks. For universality, most power banks output to a USB cable.

So the issue then becomes one of charge capacity, or how much power you need with your particular device. That of course varies, but it behoves us here to take a step back and understand the true purpose of the power bank.

As we mentioned before, you already have a charger, one that you likely plug in overnight to ensure your phone is ready for the next day. You can bump that up with blasts from a car charger during the day, or simply by plugging into the wall or the USB port on your computer as you work away at your desk. That's just a part of your charging routine. By contrast, a power bank is for those moments when your phone is in imminent danger of going dead and you need to gain enough time to get back to your regular charging routine. Invariably these moments are never more than fifteen to thirty minutes long, with rare instances stretching to a few hours.

If you think of your phone as a car, and your charger as a gas station, then think of the power bank as a Jerrycan. You only need that Jerrycan to buy you enough time to get you to a gas station.

Instead of litres and gallons, you measure the capacity of a battery in Milliamp Hours (or mAh). A power bank is really just a battery, combined with helpful gadgets like USB ports and shielding circuitry (thermal and short-circuit protection are available in advanced models). Your phone also contains a battery. Fill that "tank" up half way and you get half the normal operating time. But how do you know what size "tank" your phone has? The seven most popular Smartphone models feature a range of 1420 to 2880 mAh. So if you have a charged 2200 mAh power bank you have more than enough to fully charge most phones, and an 80% charge at the high-end of the scale.

More than enough to get you to the station, under even the worst of circumstances.

It is worth noting that all batteries loose mAh capacity over time, as their cycles (times used and recharged) increase. Extreme heat and cold exacerbate the issue, so leaving them in a hot car in the summer or a cold car in the winter affects them detrimentally. It's also worth noting that batteries lose charge even without use, so that topping them up now and again is recommended.

"...think of a power bank as a life recharger, a redundancy system for emergencies."

The very final aspect of a power bank to consider is one of output. That's how much power USB port that is transferring to your phone is rated for. Think of it as the pouring spout on the Jerrycan.

One amp (1A) is standard for recharging most Smartphones, while many tablets prefer 2.1A.

Power banks power your ability for mobility. They are lifelines in a time of crisis. Whether they're saving that dropped call to your mother or an entire corporate partnership deal, what they ultimately buy you is something far beyond measurement in mere mAh. That's peace of mind, and a second chance.

WEARABLE TECHNOLOGY

by Sergio Munoz

Oh, the ubiquitous computer!

Insidious little digital chips have worked their way into every facet of our lives, whether we know it or not. Traffic lights, car bumpers, toothbrushes, toilets, utensils – the list goes on. They’ve even snuck into the plush toys our children snuggle up to at night, silently tittering away in assembly language and biding their time until daybreak. How much further will they integrate into our lives? Are we destined for a Borg-like future, assimilated into the collective and entwined by Bionanotechnology, all free-will forever deleted from our souls?

Probably not. But the truth is that technology is set to continue its migration closer to our bodies, albeit in a more benevolent manner than science fiction would have us believe. In all likelihood, the level of techno-integration that future generations will unthinkingly employ will astound us, just as the thought of hurtling through the troposphere in winged jet-tubes would have astounded our ancestors. The trend is becoming all too clear; we are poised to enter the golden age of wearable technology.

Do you remember the first time you saw the digital calculator watch? What a marvel of innovation that was! Along came the cellular telephone, with every iteration seeing a decrease in scale – from the Ghostbuster-esque backpack phone, to the cyborg-reminiscent in-ear models. We’ve learned some lessons along the way, certainly (an over-estimation of our calculating needs; an under-estimation of how silly an in-ear phone looks), but we’re figuring it out. It’s about ergonomics – that perfect fusion between function and design. Encumbrances of the past will not be tolerated. Technologies will need to work seamlessly together. A universal language will evolve to curate the exchange of timely and relevant information. And it won’t hurt if it looks cool, too.

Eye glasses that work as a real-time HUD system will be fun and functional. Augmented reality will fuse history with currency, putting both a virtual tour guide and a digital Zagat in your pocket. Watches synced to phones allow for a hands-free conversation while driving. Touchscreen gloves in cold weather allow us to continue to interact with our devices.

Technology designed to extend human capabilities, and to do it easily.

More exciting still is the health and wellness potential.

Imagine a watch that could warn you of an impending heart attack just from listening to the sound of your blood flow. Or a wristband monitoring arrhythmia or measuring blood-glucose levels. What about an undershirt that incorporates a defibrillator? What you put on that morning could ultimately ensure your safe return that night.

Wellness applications are already well established. Digital pedometers are a highly effective means of general activity measurement. When combined with fitness software they become like digitized personal trainers. Body monitors are all part of the ‘Quantified Self’ movement, in what could be considered the evolution of prophylactic medicine. Store and upload your Biometric data to the Cloud for evaluation. Why not download the ‘health templates’ of Hollywood stars, in an effort to mimic their workout and dietary routines?

“...for the near future the trend is becoming all too clear; we are poised to enter the golden age of wearable technology.”

What if your doctor could be alerted to a condition before you are? Hospital triage software could reduce stress on the healthcare system, optimizing staff levels to reduce wait times. Emergency services deployed algorithmically, with 911 calls made by sensors embedded in jewelry. Fallen down and can’t get back up? You’ll wait mere moments before help arrives.

Health census data delivered in real time could help prevent epidemics. Interventions deployed instantly would ultimately prolong lifespans. Reducing uncertainty, predicting needs, preventing illness and improving the quality of life – this is the true potential of wearable technology. And all this started by a humble wristwatch calculator.

POINT/ COUNTER- POINT

Do the Tech-out Checkout!

by Daniel Baker

We all love our tech, particularly our Smartphones. But, believe it or not, you can turn them off once in a while. After all, they do come with power buttons, right? Heck, you can even leave them at home for an afternoon – you won’t perish. It’s a phone, not a pacemaker, insulin or an Epi-pen. You might even find there are some health benefits that come with detaching that phone from your hip. What could those possibly be?

1. Vertebral realignment. Remember when your mother used to bug you about standing up straight? She wasn’t wrong, you know. Today’s smartphone addicts begin to resemble Quasimodo more and more with each passing day. Continuously hunched over the phone, necks bent over, lips moving with each syllable read through sleep-deprived, ring-darkened eyes. Stand up straight and peer forth from your gloomy huddle, before the mob comes to spirit you away! Gaze again to the horizon, straighten out that windpipe and breathe in the free air. You’ll find that perpetual kink in your neck simply melts away. You can erase the chiropractor from your contact list. You’ll realize the world beyond arms reach is actually beautiful. And your mother will finally stop nagging you!

2. Synaptic regeneration. Remember when you could spell? Life has no omnipotent autocorrect to guide you, and that’s a good thing. Do you forget the difference between there, their and they’re? Ever text the phrase “your a moron” to someone espousing spurious logic, only to find you’d unwittingly turned the comment on yourself? And does anyone remember laughter? I’ll bet they don’t. Can’t we tell LOL, ROTFL and LMAO to STFU for once? Can we stop reducing the complexities of the human emotional palate to acronyms and emoticons? Please? Put down that phone and pick up a conversation; it’s amazing how dynamic a tete-a-tete can be when it’s not all fingers and opposable thumbs. Talk to that person standing five feet away instead of texting them, and learn the joys of speaking in full sentences once again. Stream some reality again, with your own eyes, in real time. Read a book instead of a Tweet. Your brain will begin to forgive you!

“Can’t we tell LOL, ROTFL and LMAO to STFU for once?”

3. Emotional balance. Here’s an idea; make a date with someone and actually keep it. Be on time. A cell phone update call is not as good as not keeping someone waiting (“Sorry, I got delayed trying to find my charger”, “Sorry, had a killer high score on Angry Birds and just couldn’t put it down”). Here’s a little tip for you; if you make plans to meet at 6pm and you can’t assuage your guilt at being late with apologetic phone calls, you’ll find you will actually show up at 6pm. And better yet, without your smartphone you’ll have a social event instead of a social media update. How important is that selfie at dinner anyway? Most restaurant washrooms have a mirror if you forget what you look like. Talk to your friend and live in the moment. Give them a hug instead of a ‘Like’. Swap a story instead of “Sharing” a picture of cats. You will find that everyone looks better in person, rather than frozen in a JPG. Their expression will change to the rhyme and meter of your anecdote – it’s called empathy, and it’s the gift live friends give to each other. You’ll get their jokes in person (because no one yet has developed a reliable Sarcastica font for text messaging). If you find you no longer know what to do with your hands, use them to shake the hand of another. You’ll both feel better – the stress will melt away. After all, no one really likes an Angry Bird.

Do the Tech-in Check-in!

by Joshua Shaw

You love your phone, you know you do. It's your soul-mate; you'd be lost without it. Just admit it – you'll feel better.

I'm not saying you love your phone more than your family, don't get me wrong. But I'll bet when your kids go to the neighbour's for the afternoon you feel less separation anxiety than you do knowing you left your phone at home for the evening. Recognize that fact - it's not a crime! This above all: to thine ownself be true. In celebration of our self-awareness, and of our embracement of better living through technology, allow me to propose three reasons why you should never, ever, be without your faithful companion and all-round best-pal – your smart phone.

1. Siri's unequivocal love. Have you seen Spike Jonze's spectacular movie "HER"? It's about a writer who unwittingly falls for his "digital assistant", a piece of software so sophisticated and devoted that he finds it unthinkable to live his life without her. Well, that's Siri (or at least Siri 3.0). Who else could bail you out when you've accidentally let your gas run down to near-empty, with the dashboard frantically warning you of 3 miles remaining in the tank? "Siri; give me gas stations within 2 miles, please." "No problem," she purrs soothingly back, instantly populating the GPS with twenty valid destinations. She's always got your back, whether it be a medical, financial or trivial emergency ("Siri; you'll never believe what happened - where's the nearest proctologist?", "Siri; I've exceeded my data plan again - please bring up my banking app", "Siri; Bill will owe me a beer if you can tell me who won the 1969 Heisman trophy?") She's more-reliable than a guide dog, more accurate than a sage, more flexible than a former-Soviet-breakaway-republic gymnast. She can wake you up in the morning, tell you what to eat for lunch, and even read you a bedtime story. She's Siri, she loves you, and you'd be lost without her.

2. Snakes Movies on a Plane. You've got a 10 hour flight, and the in-flight entertainment screen displays a list of films destined to be relegated to the torture theatre in the seventh "more-reliable than a guide dog, more accurate than a sage, more flexible than a former-Soviet-breakaway-republic gymnast."

level of hell. Never fear, you've got Hollywood in your pocket. You're one download away from slaying dragons with Bilbo, getting "Baby" out of the corner, and frankly, not giving a damn! That nosy neighbour in the adjoining seat craning his neck to view your on screen goods? Well then, you've got your whole music library with you, too. Had enough of the tunes and descent is still not eminent? Get yourself Bejeweled for goodness sakes! There may be no snakes on this plane, but there sure-as-shooting are Angry Birds!

3. Immortality awaits. It was a "eureka" moment the first time you saw a portable phone with a camera in it. Where had it been all your life? You never seemed to have a camera around when you needed it, and now you will never need it. Baby's first steps; preserved. Your cat and dog, snuggling on the couch; bam, caught in the act! Grandpa sitting on your motorcycle, rewinding it up? Let 'er rip! And what happens if you're visiting Loch Ness and a certain scaly introvert deigns to come up for air? You'd never forgive yourself if you missed the opportunity. The fame and the fortune of the perfect photo is now never beyond the reach of your phone. After all, even the most committed probe-wielding alien is not immune to the lure of the "selfie".

I think I'm a pretty with-it cat. I mean, I pound out a few hundred emails a week. My fingers flutter texts out on my Smartphone, as I engage in regular, rapid-fire back-and-forths with my friends and contemporaries. I have my digital music library in my hip pocket with me wherever I go. I know what Facebook and Twitter are, and there isn't a thing my new-fangled TV/PVR receiver can throw at me that I can't ultimately handle.

But having kicked around this planet for a number of years, and having usefully worked those experiences into a cache of habits and preferences that have served me well, I don't always feel the need to jump at the newest fads and gadgets. A guy could end up with a house full of useless junk that way. However, every now and again a trend comes along worth noting. Even more rarely, that trend evolves to become an essential part of my life.

My attention was piqued as I watched our new Tech offerings steadily assail our sales reports. Day in and out, I was amazed by their unyielding ascent up the top category rankings. When Tech broke out as our number one growth category, I knew I had to act. Time to get educated, I thought.

But being an 'old school' guy, as the kids would put it, I felt a quaver of apprehension at what I envisioned to be a steep learning curve. I called up a couple of the young guns in the office, grabbed a hold of a trusty pen and padfolio, and headed into an impromptu PK, eyes steely with determination. Turns out it wasn't so bad after all. I did take some notes, however. "Hey," I thought, "Maybe another 'old school' guy could benefit from these, too." So here they are, from one 'Tech dummy' to another; my Tech Cheat Sheet for Dummies.

Power banks

- Use the USB charging cable that came with your device.
- mAh is the measure of how much power a battery can hold.
- A 1A output is enough to power Smartphones.

Pairing your phone with a Bluetooth device

- Go into the Settings page of your phone, and activate Bluetooth function.
- The phone will scan for nearby devices. Select yours when it comes up.
- The devices will get acquainted and sync up.

Using a Bluetooth speaker for a conference call

- Make sure you use a Bluetooth speaker that features a microphone.
- Pair your phone to the speaker.
- Use the phone to the call, place the speaker in the middle of the group.

Using an Induction speaker

- Place the phone on top of the phone in a way that maximizes contact.
- Start the music as you would normally.
- To get the best sound, move the phone around to find the 'sweet spot'.

OTG Technology

- OTG stands for On-the-Go.
- It's just like a USB flash drive for your phone.
- Plugs in to your phone using the micro USB jack.
- Great for transferring photos from phone to phone.
- OTG drives feature a USB jack for transferring files from phone to computer.

3-in-1 Cables

- Great to have around because they work for so many devices.
- Can be a lifesaver if you lose the manufacturer's charge cable.
- Also great if you have multiple devices, but only want to carry one cable around.

The mighty Stylus

- Seniors find it more natural to interact with touchscreen devices.
- Perfect for ladies with long nails.
- Can help protect your screen.

PERSONALIZATION

Using Debcos Perfect Print and MAX Perfect Print decorating methods, personalization may be added for a small fee*. Now you can easily and affordably individualize each product in your order with recipients' names, numbers, dates, addresses, QR codes, and/or titles. The information that is personalized is restricted to a one colour imprint and must be contained within the dimensions of the four colour process Perfect Print or MAX Perfect Print (see Decorating Info on website for Perfect Print and MAX Perfect Print sizing and pricing). Personalized information must be submitted at the time of order entry in an Excel document with one name/title/number per cell. Please advise imprint colour, font size and font (see website for a list of fonts available). Times New Roman will be the default font if none specified.

Catalogue imprinted minimums must be respected.

Personalization is not available for NOW! Service, Fast Forward or 3 Day rush.

A preproduction sample of one of the personalized items is required for approval prior to production of the full order.

* In addition to the $50.00(G) set up for Perfect Print, there is one additional set up charge of $50.00(G) applicable to your personalized order. There are no per unit running costs for personalization.

INSERT YOUR OWN PEN

No extra charge to insert your own pen. A Return Authorization number must be obtained from an Account Manager prior to shipping your pens to Debcos. The pens must be delivered to Debcos prior to production of your order. Our PE4772 Recycled Paper Pen will not be included in orders that involve Debcos inserting your pens.

Unauthorized reproduction, duplication or use of any image, graphic, or text used on Debcos website and catalogues is strictly prohibited. © Debcos Bag Distributors Ltd.
